‘Fuck It: I Will Do What It Takes,’ Says LG Williams

By LACEY MACEY

NEW YORK, NEW YORK — Efforts to deliver art to the artworld intensified on Friday as the voices of collectors and patrons begged for more.

Thousands of collectors from all over the world and thirty-eight from Beverly Hills are still in dire need of LG’s art, and patience was wearing thin on the streets of Chelsea as LG went another day making art.

On Friday, LG also cautioned that it would take time to complete the orders, but he said don’t worry.

“Fuck it: As I realize that people need art, I will continue to provide. The dude provides!”

Speaking like a cranked-up carnie with a blow horn at a Manhattan news conference, LG said that about 569 artworks would be sent out this month. “You can look at his fucking amazing website and see that it’s extremely busy,” said Dr. Mark Stoner, a Harvard historian with a search-and-buy internet art company from Fairfax, Va. “The last thing we want to do is get LG in a situation where he needs to be rescued.”

“The time window is ever shrinking, pretty soon it will be the incredible shrinking time window” said Flora Imaso Easey, a spokesman for The Estate of LG Williams.

“There’s more life here than the residence home, that’s for sure,” said a grandmother hobbling past the crowd on Thursday, who nonetheless dragged a worn broom against the sidewalk in hopes to find some discarded cigarette butts.

“They just keep coming like the Playboy channel,” said LG, who estimated his website had seen some 500,000,000,341 people in three days. Normally, he said, busy was when he saw 100,000 in that time.
