HONOLULU, April 6, 2010— FUCKTHATGALLERY presents LG Williams: You Feel Good < Gröpe >, the first large-scale American gallery presentation of the artist’s groundbreaking “Gröperformance” series, from May 4 to May 28, 2010. Internationally recognized as a pioneer and key figure in “Gröperformance” art, LG Williams (United States, b. 1969) uses groping as subject, object, and medium, exploring the physical and mental limits of groping art gallery attendees. The exhibition traces Williams’ prolific tactile interests and experiences with over a month of solo “Gröperformances”, and collaborative “Gröperformances”.

Also included is the world premiere of a new work to be performed by Williams himself entitled “LGröperformance” performed especially for this exhibition. LG Williams: You Feel Good < Gröpe > is organized by FUCKTHATGALLERY.

Williams, best known for his wild animal craziness, has created a new work for this exhibition. “LGröperformance”—You Feel Good < Gröpe > (2010)— will be performed daily throughout the run of the exhibition, for a total of over 690 hours. For his longest solo piece to date, Williams will repeatedly Gröperformance and LGröpepeople visiting the gallery during public hours, i.e. “unexpectedly” grope visitors for as long as they choose within the timeframe of the gallery’s hours of operation (if you want more you will have to pay dearly). Entering the gallery signifies permission and visitor participation completes the piece and allows them to have a personal experience with the artist and the artwork.
